

Have you had a Near Death Experience or some other non-ordinary experience that fundamentally altered your beliefs or understanding about death and dying?

The States of Consciousness Research Team at Johns Hopkins needs your help. We're conducting an anonymous, web-based research study to characterize experiences that fundamentally altered your beliefs or understanding about death and dying.

If you've ever had such an experience, we would greatly appreciate it if you would take our survey. If you know of others who have ever had an experience of a personal divine encounter, please send them the link and encourage them to participate. This includes people who had such an experience long ago.

As you may know, our team has conducted survey and laboratory studies investigating spirituality, religion, and altered states of consciousness. This new survey is an important extension of our published and ongoing research on altered states of consciousness, mystical experiences, and existential anxiety.
